

Catskill: What if it Happened Here?

A train carrying Bakken crude oil derailed in Lac Megantic, Quebec, in July, 2013, exploding and killing 47 people in a fire that spread 300 yards, and prompted a 1,100-yard evacuation zone. Trains carrying millions of gallons of the same explosive crude travel through Catskill twice each day.

riverkeeper.org/crude

#NotOnMyWatch

After a Bakken Crude Oil accident in Casselton, N.D., in 2013, people as far away as 5 miles were evacuated.

cartographer: Christopher Bride, 2014